Luvince came to the Clinic of Hope suffering from severe malnutrition. It was the result of accidentally ingesting lye, causing his throat to narrow and making it difficult to swallow. The clinic staff confirmed the diagnosis with the help of a Haitian gastroenterologist, who arranged to have two Haitian surgeons perform surgery to correct the problem – at no expense. Luvince made a full recovery.

Luvince is just one of the many Haitians who receive care from the staff at the Clinic of Hope in Terre Blanche. The clinic is supported by Haiti Foundation of Hope. Several volunteer medical teams travel to the clinic each year but the clinic is open year-round and staffed by Haitians, who assist patients like Luvince every day.

who came to the clinic at the end of last year. With the assistance of a pediatrician from Yakima, Washington, Daniel's condition can be managed with resources available at the clinic.

Last summer, five-year-old Joel came to the clinic and was subsequently diagnosed with severe congenital heart disease. He needed surgery. Pastor Delamy, a partner with Haiti Foundation of Hope, found a Haitian cardiologist to evaluate Joel. The cardiologist, at his own expense, arranged to have Joel travel to France for surgery. The surgery was a success and Joel spent his recovery in France.

MICRO-LOANS

Several years ago, Haiti Foundation of Hope began laying the groundwork for a micro-loan program to assist people in starting their own small businesses.

Last year, HFH started a micro-loan training program in Terre Blanche. Forty participants (35 women and 5 men) completed the 27-lesson curriculum. A new class with 15 participants started earlier this year.

Everyone who successfully completes the program is eligible for a loan based on a business plan developed during the training. A typical loan is $150 to $500 (U.S.). These seemingly small loans can make a difference. They can make it possible for a family to eat regularly or for a parent to send a child to school.

We invite you to join with us in encouraging these entrepreneurial people.

HFH has set a goal of raising $17,500 to provide funds for these loans. The first $10,000 has already been given, leaving $7,500 to complete the goal. Would you like to help meet this goal? You can donate online at haitifoundationofhope.org.
